

The DVL Scholarship Project has awarded over Sixteen Thousand Dollars in scholarships since 2014.

DVL accepts applications and awards the scholarships regardless of race, ethnicity, gender, disability or social or economic class or religious affiliation.

Eligible students include high school graduating senior students in school districts, both public and private in the High Desert as well as college or university students enrolled in postsecondary, regionally accredited institutions —local or national.

Additional eligibility details including GPA requirements are found on the DVL website www.dvlproject.com

Scholarship awards to outstanding students 18 to 24 years old.

Selection Process

A highly diverse group of Selectors reviews the applications and selects the student who best represents the ideals and mission of the DVL Legacy Honoree-in that category.

In the first year of the scholarship, the Selectors were so impressed by the outstanding accomplishments of the applicants that they raised additional funds to award six scholarships instead of the planned three scholarships.

The DVL Project was delighted to learn that the students selected for the DVL Legacy Scholarships were recipients also of several other highly selective scholarships for their achievements in high school and their contributions to their communities.

To date 32 high achieving students from across the High Desert region each received $500.00 which was awarded directly to them.

History of the Project

The scholarship project is an outgrowth of the parent project, Dreamers, Visionaries and Leaders, (an Affiliate Fund of the High Desert Community Foundation) which for 10 years recognized those who have contributed in some way to the livability of this region.

In 2014, its sixth year of honoring local adult and young citizens whose contributions have enriched this region, Founder and Executive Director Regina Bell chose to expand the success of the DVL project by adding a scholarship component.
